Swati is a fourteen-year-old girl with an innocent face and a broken heart; she is the victim of severe poverty and domestic violence at home. She is bereaved of her fundamental right for getting an education; she has not seen a school in her entire life so far. She was saddened by her childhood and could not dare to see a dream for her best future because she was living under the shadow of darkness and the poverty with all her family members. Her father is an unemployed and alcoholic. He never thinks beyond himself and his addiction. Her mother worked as a housemaid and earned approx. Rs 3,000 per month. Her father forced physically to her mother to give him money to buy alcohol; it was so shocking to know that he uses to sell his blood to buy alcohol, sometimes he became parsimonious and over-powered Swati to sell her blood so that he can buy alcohol with this money.

Such inhuman behaviour of her father towards all family members ended Swati with a broken heart and the sullenest childhood. One day, her mother came to know about Indian Dreams Foundation's girls' education sponsoring and mentoring program "Honhar Ladki". Swati was selected for this program and enrolled in a public school. She is enjoying study and trying to cope up with the curriculum so that she can match with the girls of her same age and same classes in future. Now, Swati and her mother are optimistic for her good and secure future, and they thanks IDF for initiating such program for girls like "Swati" and given them hope for fulfilling their dreams.
