Sonam's father died in December 2015 due to kidney failure. He worked as a brick mason and earned very little money for the family survival. His untimely demise was met with immense sorrow to all family members and mainly affected to Sonam. She is the youngest of all her four siblings and very focused in her study, and she was also regular in school. However, after her father's death, her family had to face critical financial problems, and because of all these situations, Sonam had to sacrifice with her study, she was drop out for the entire academic year.

One year later, her mother tried to re-enrol Sonam, but she was still unable to bear her educational expenses. The school management has suggested about Indian Dreams Foundation's girls' education sponsoring and mentoring program. With efforts from her mother, Sonam was selected for the program and sponsored by IDF, and she was re-enrolled in school. She is trying very hard to get back on track and perform well in her study; her teachers believe that she will be able to excel in her performance very soon.
